Cryptocurrency exchanges technically can be of two types: custodial and non-custodial. Custodial exchanges hold their users funds, non-custodial crypto exchanges do not. But how that happens is a complex story with multiple intricacies hidden inside.

When you research crypto assets, you may run into a special type of price graph called a candlestick chart. So its good to take a little time to learn how these work. Similar to more familiar line and bar graphs, candlesticks show time across the horizontal axis, and price data on the vertical axis.

Moving averages are among the most popular Songbird price prediction tools. As the name suggests, a moving average provides the average closing price for SGB over a selected time period. For example, a 12-day simple moving average for SGB is a sum of SGBs closing prices over the last 12 days which is then divided by 12.

Candlestick charts are a major part of reading crypto charts. Every candle has a main body in either of the colors. You can also see single lines protruding from above and below the main body, called shadows. The body shows the opening and closing prices, and the shadows depict how high or low these starting and closing prices have risen or fallen.

Opposed to a custodial exchange that requires control of your funds, a non-custodial exchange allows you to trade without handing over your funds to a third-party and the ability to maintain control over your private keys. If you are the only person with access to your private keys, only you can choose what happens with your funds, and this is one of the reasons non-custodial exchanges can be extremely secure to use.
